THINGS ARE NEVER QUIET AT THE MURPHY BOARDING HOUSE FOR TOO LONG ...

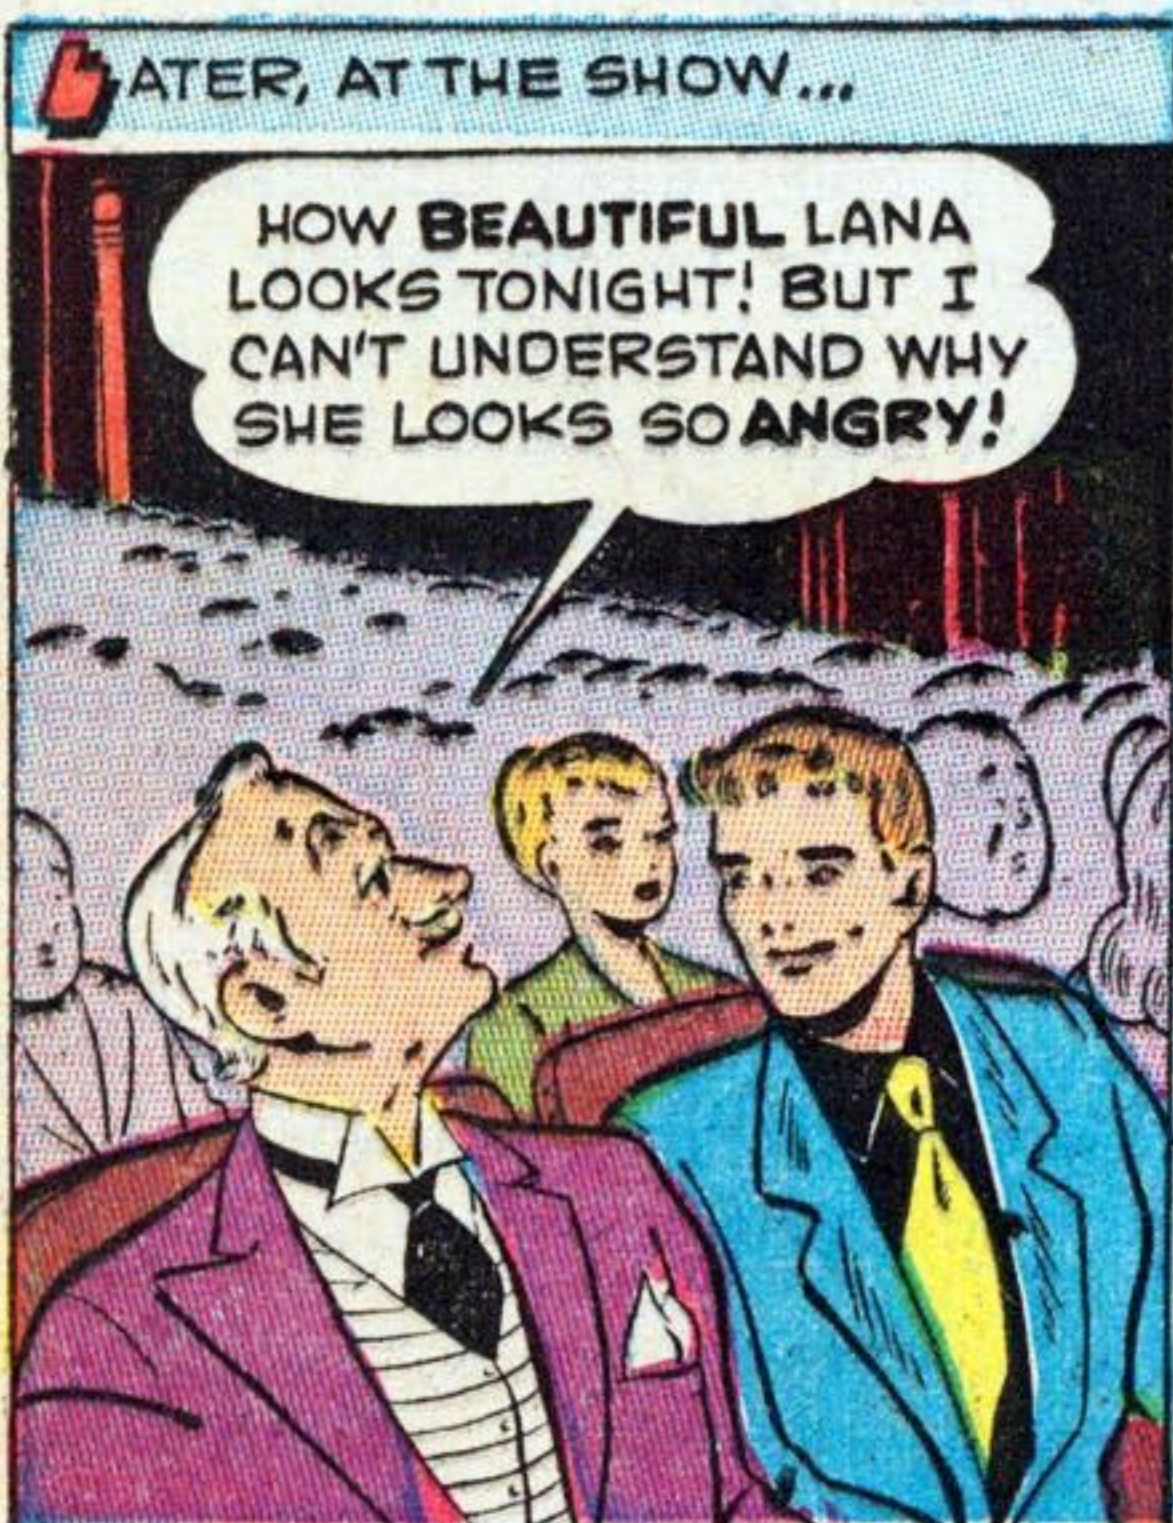

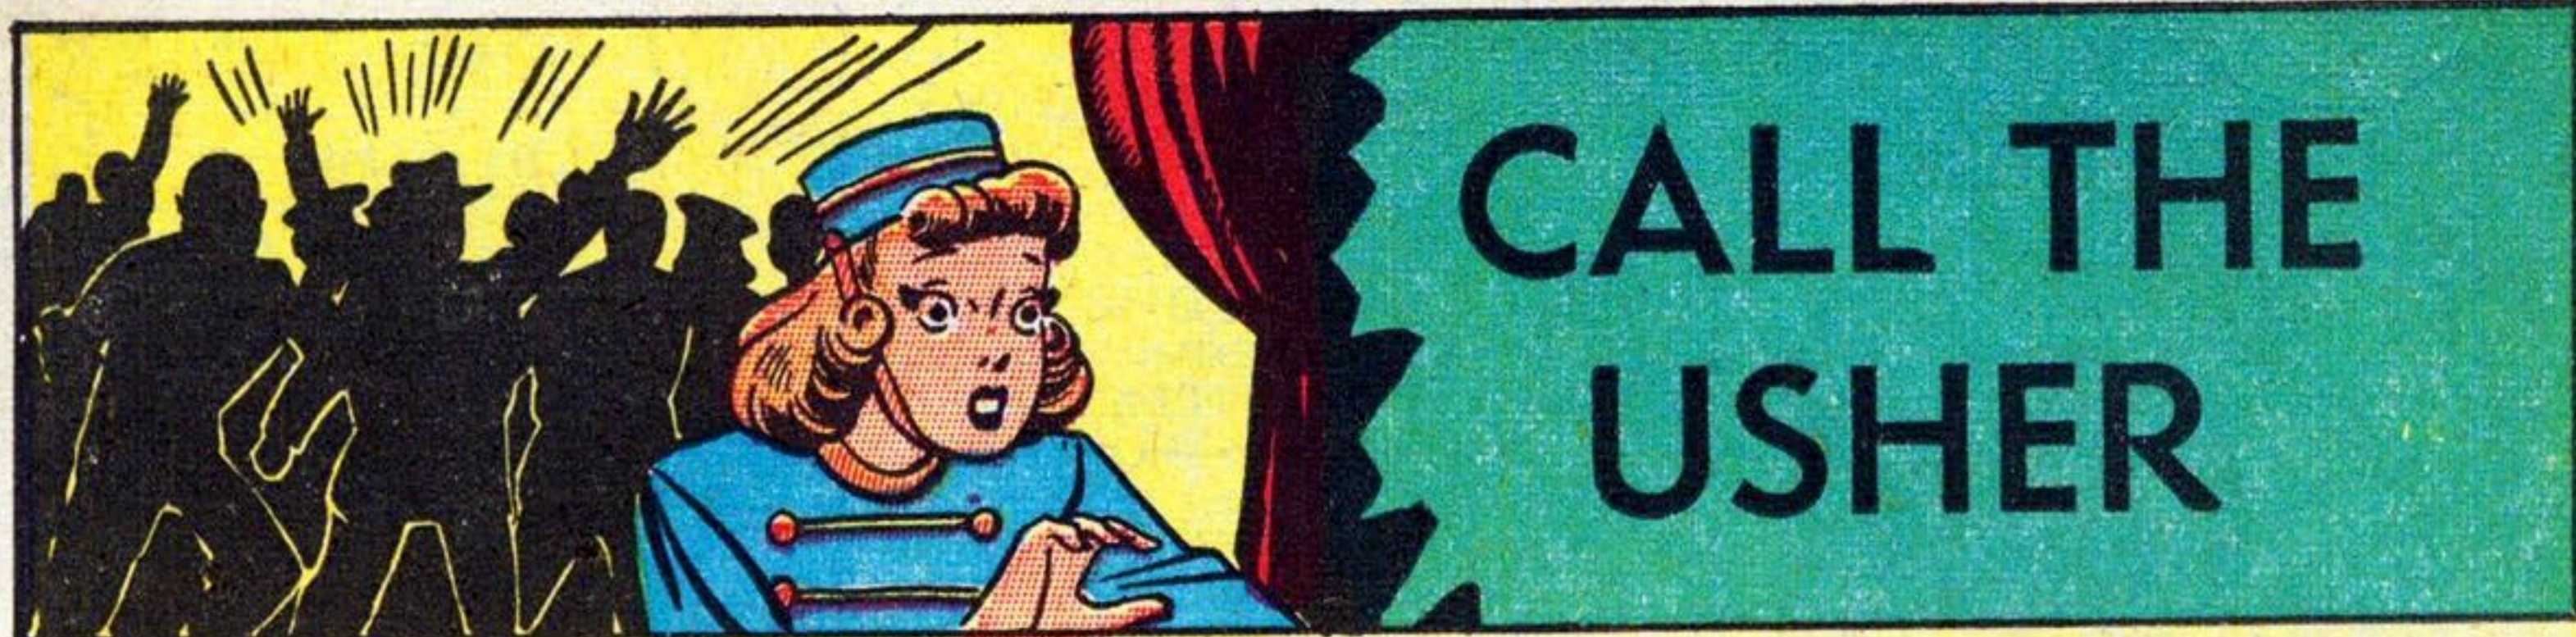

AND A FEW SECONDS LATER...A HEARTBROKEN, LITTLE SHOWGIRL SEES...

IN THE TWINKLING OF AN EYE, MICKEY RETURNS, LOADED WITH PACKAGES!

Alice shook her pig bank vigorously. It barely tinkled. She sighed despairingly. Christmas was menacingly close, and there wasn't enough in the pig bank even to buy a cheap Christmas card. Alice thought for a minute and then made a beeline for the telephone.

"Is this the manager of the State Theater?" she asked hopefully.

Without waiting for an answer she found out immediately that the job for an usherette was still open, and the conversation ended with her promise to report for work the following Saturday.

She had just replaced the receiver, when her mother came into the room.

"Who was that?" Mrs. Moss inquired.

"Mother, I've got the most exciting news!" Alice said excitedly.

"Don't tell me Paul Connors has finally asked you for a date!" Mrs. Moss smiled.

"No. Not yet. But I've got a job!" she announced proudly "I'm going to usher at the State this Saturday. I don't know just how much he's going to pay me. But isn't it swell?"

Slightly bewildered, Mrs. Moss sat down. "I doubt whether your father will approve," she said.

Alice looked stunned. "He just has to approve! I've got all that Christmas shopping to do."

"Well, don't worry about it now. We'll ask him tonight."

Fortunately, Mr. Moss was in a happy frame of mind that evening. But it wasn't until he had settled down to read his newspaper that Alice found enough courage to ask him whether or not she could accept the job.

"Father, I . . ." she began.

"How much?" chuckled Mr. Moss.

"Dad! I've got a job!" she said all in one breath.

Mr. Moss was mildly surprised. "That's nice. Whose baby are you sitting with?" he commented absent-mindedly.

"I'm ushering at the State all day Saturday."

"You're what?" roared Mr. Moss.

"Now, Fred," interrupted Alice's mother, "there's nothing to get excited about."

Mr. Moss folded up his paper very calmly. He leaned back in his chair and looked sternly at his wife and daughter.

"I'm going to have my say this time, and when I'm all finished you can go ahead and do what you want. First of all," he pointed out, "Saturday is the day when all the kids in town go to the show. I don't have to describe what goes on. It's like ten circuses in one. You'll be ready for a nervous breakdown when the day is over."

"But I can take the job?" Alice asked eagerly.

"On the conditions that you don't quit in the middle and that you stick it out as long as you promise the manager you will." Mr. Moss started to read his paper, and Alice knew the subject was closed.

The next day in school Alice told her friends about her new job. They weren't as envious of her as she'd thought they'd be. They advised her to eat plenty of vitamins the day before.

"I know this'll make you jump with glee," said Lois Grey. "Tomorrow they're having two cowboy pictures besides the cartoons and the serial!"

"T-two cowboy pictures?" Alice asked lamely.

"'Fraid so, Al," Lois sympathized.

By Saturday morning Alice's enthusiasm had waned. She started out for the theater with a heavy heart. When she reached the State, she was greeted with a chilling sight. In front of the ticket booth were jammed from 50 to 75 shouting boys and girls. They were obviously anxious to catch the cowboy spirit—they had lassos, pea-shooters, guns, and even ten gallon hats.

Alice had an impulse to run away from the theater as fast as she could. But she thought of the empty pig bank—and her father's words. She marched into the theater with determination.

Mr. Bowers, the manager, seemed glad to see her.

STAMP NEWS

By KENT B. STILES

The new Postmaster General, Jesse M. Donaldson, is a stamp collector and this assures that the hobby of philately will receive understanding attention. A stamp-issuing program for 1948 has already been mapped out partly factual and partly tentative, as follows:

The new year's first item is a 3-cent purple released on Jan. 5 in honor of George Washington Carver, the Negro agricultural scientist who died in 1943.

On Jan. 24, 1848, gold was discovered in California, and a centenary commemorative stamp is promised.

A third postal piece definitely announced for 1948 is one with a portrait of Francis Scott Key, who in 1814 wrote the words of our national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner."

Congress recently enacted legislation directing the Post Office Department to issue a stamp honoring Gold Star mothers, and this will appear probably in 1948.

A few months hence the nation will observe the fiftieth anniversary of the start of the Spanish-American War, in 1898, and a bill introduced in the House of Representatives would authorize the issuing of a commemorative postal paper. In June will be celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the organizing of Theodore Roosevelt's "Rough Riders" of Spanish-American War fame, and a special stamp is being requested by friends of his surviving troopers, about one hundred.

This is Wisconsin's centennial year, as that State was admitted to the Union in 1848. The Post Office Department is expected to issue a Wisconsin commemorative.

A bill pending in Congress would direct the Postmaster General to print a stamp in memory of the late Fiorello H. La Guardia, a former New York City mayor.

In October may appear a stamp honoring Sequoyah, the half-blood Cherokee Indian who devised the Cherokee alphabet.

Undoubtedly other stamps will be issued during 1948.

HARRIS & CO., 111 Transit Bldg., BOSTON, MASS.

"We'll have to get you a uniform," he said, looking through the closet.

"Ah! This ought to fit you." He held up a rather untidy outfit that looked about seven sizes too large.

"Is that the smallest one you've got?" asked Alice.

"You'll find some pins in the dressing room. Anyway, it's dark in the theater. No one will see that the uniform's too large." He dismissed her problem and turned his attention to some papers on his desk.

Alice got into the uniform. She nearly tripped over the skirt. When she finished pinning it on, any difference between her and a pin cushion was hard to find.

She had just perched the little hat on top of her head when she heard a mighty roar. She thought that the building was caving in, and her first instinct was to dash for cover. Then she realized with sinking heart that the theater had been opened and the little ladies and gentlemen were taking their seats.

Alice braced herself to face the thundering herd. She stood at the side of the middle aisle—but not for long. The eager audience swept her along till she was almost on top of the screen, but she pushed against the tide until she reached the back of the theater again.

Everyone finally found seats. In some cases there were three or four aspiring cowboys piled up in one seat, but that seemed to be the usual procedure. The noise was deafening. Guns were popping both on and off the screen. Occasionally a loud "ouch" told of a successful hit with a peashooter.

The exciting part of the picture quieted the audience down to some extent. Alice watched the dreary plot unfold itself on the screen. The thought that she would have to view the same thing many more times before she was through made her sick.

The calm didn't last long. The children started the din again. Alice wondered if they felt the same way she did about the movie.

She heard a hissing noise. Before she could even turn around, she felt her arms being tied to her sides—she had been lassoed! The would-be cowboy at the other end of the rope smiled happily.

"Please let g-go!" pleaded Alice.

Just then Mr. Bowers came around on his tour of inspection.

"Playing cowboys and Indians, Miss Moss?" he frowned.

Alice smiled helplessly. Mr. Bowers glared and walked away. The cowboy eventually untied Alice, but continued spreading "sunshine" in another direction. In the following half hour she was warned to "stick 'em up" about five times. Peashooters found her a good target more often than she cared to think about. Her feet ached, her ears were bursting, and her voice was failing her.

She felt a thud against her head and put her hand cautiously up to her hair. Quickly she pulled her fingers away. Gum! A big, sticky wad of gum was clinging for dear life. The day was endless. When Mr. Bowers told her she could leave, Alice almost cried with joy.

"We start our help off with a nice surprise. A week's pass to the State good for any and every night!" Mr. Bowers beamed happily.

Alice staggered home with the pass clutched in her hand. She wondered what kind of a present it would be for her mother. She didn't dare offer it to her father.

Mrs. Moss greeted her at the door. "Alice, I . . . why, Al!" Mrs. Moss looked at the sad spectacle her daughter presented.

"Before you say or do anything, Mother, please cut the gum out of my hair," Alice said wearily.

Mrs. Moss silently complied with Alice's wishes.

"Paul Connors called," she said.

Alice almost leaped for joy. "He called me?" she screamed ecstatically.

"I was positive you'd want to go out with him tonight so I thought you wouldn't mind if I made the arrangements," Mrs. Moss continued with a worried look.

"That's sensational, Mother!"

"I could call him back and tell him you're tired," Mrs. Moss suggested.

Alice was puzzled.

"Well," Mrs. Moss explained uneasily, "he said he liked wild west pictures, and I told him about the bill at the State. He was very enthusiastic, and he left to get tickets right away."

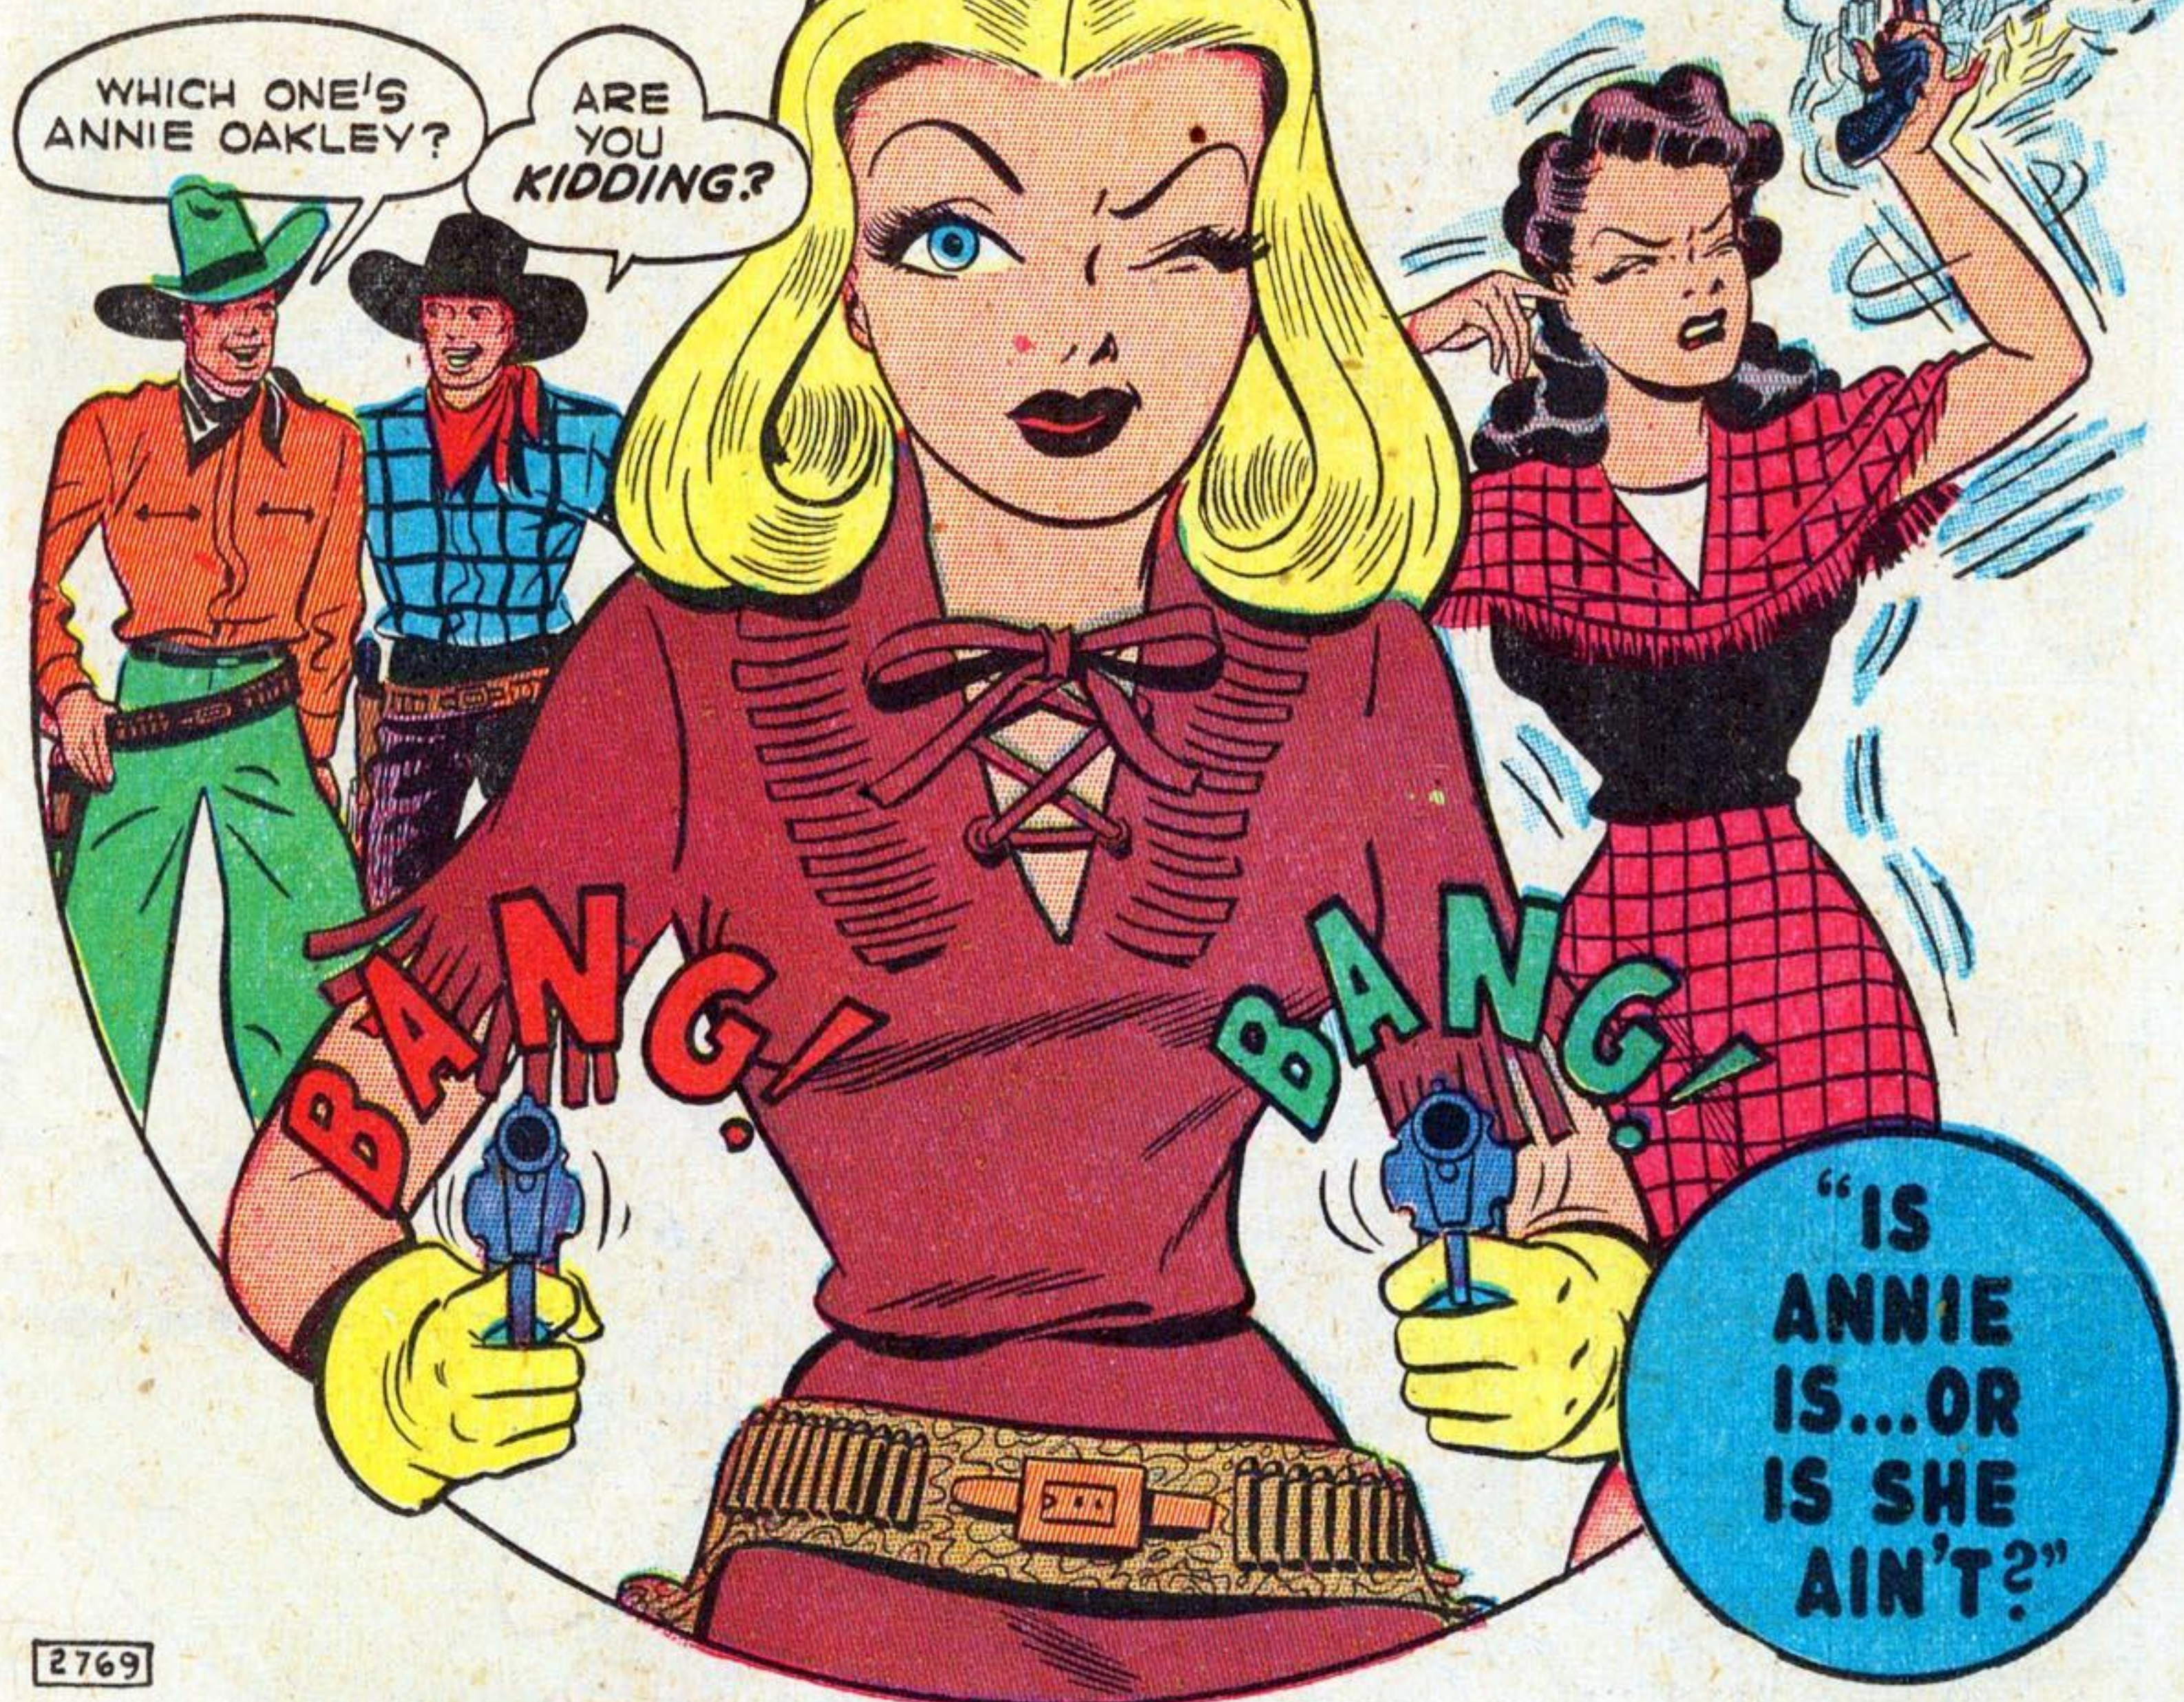

Alice related the events of the day, but the thought of a date with Paul had dwarfed everything else. "Mother, if I come back with a western drawl, totin' a shootin' iron, and yelling 'wahoo'—just lasso me!"
